Second Series Match Call for Applications Opens, Connecting Production Companies from Germany, Ibero-America and the Nordic Countries

Interested companies can submit their applications until 20 November 2026 to take part in this international co-production initiative, whose second edition will take place as part of the Berlinale Series Market from 14 to 16 February 2027.

Madrid, 14 October 2026. Iberseries & Platino Industria and Berlinale Series Market open the call for applications for the second edition of Series Match, a professional networking initiative designed to foster the development of TV series projects and create new opportunities for international co-development and co-production between Germany and Ibero-America. In 2027, the initiative will expand its scope to include the Nordic countries, represented by TV Drama Vision, the TV series platform of the Göteborg Film Festival.

Interested production companies can submit their applications until 20 November 2026 to take part in the initiative, which will run from 14 to 16 February 2027, during the Berlinale Series Market, part of the Berlinale's European Film Market (EFM) in Berlin.

Series Match was launched in 2026 as a joint initiative by Iberseries & Platino Industria and Berlinale Series Market, with the aim of bringing together German and Ibero-American production companies with TV series projects in the early stages of development. Its first edition brought together ten production companies — five German and five Ibero-American — from Brazil, Uruguay, Chile, Spain and Germany. Participants had the opportunity to explore new avenues for collaboration and establish contacts with potential international partners.

For this second edition, Series Match is expanding its reach through the participation of TV Drama Vision, bringing production companies and projects from its network into the initiative and strengthening connections between three strategic territories within the international audiovisual industry: Germany, Ibero-America and the Nordic countries.

The initiative is aimed at three categories of participants:

- Ibero-American production companies with TV series projects in the early stages of development, seeking German and/or Nordic partners to advance their international co-production plans.

- Production companies from the Nordic countries with series projects in development and an interest in establishing co-production partnerships with German and/or Ibero-American companies.
- German production companies interested in exploring co-production opportunities with the selected companies and projects from Ibero-America and the Nordic countries. For this category, submitting an original project is not mandatory. However, companies are encouraged to share their development slate to help identify potential synergies.

The second edition of Series Match will follow a curated selection process and feature one-to-one meetings tailored to the profiles, interests and needs of participating companies.

The programme is expected to bring together five Ibero-American projects, between two and three Nordic projects, and up to eight German production companies. Through tailored meetings, participants will be able to identify potential partners, explore creative and financial synergies, exchange industry experience and receive feedback from audiovisual professionals and experts.

Selected companies will receive an EFM Market Badge, granting access to the European Film Market and the activities of the Berlinale Series Market, thereby expanding their networking opportunities and enabling them to connect with key players in the international audiovisual industry.

A strategic partnership to foster international co-production

The launch of this second call for applications is part of the renewal, for the fourth consecutive year, of the strategic partnership between Iberseries & Platino Industria and Berlinale Series Market. This collaboration has evolved into the creation of dedicated platforms and initiatives aimed at fostering business relationships and the development of international projects.

With the addition of TV Drama Vision, Series Match further strengthens its commitment to connecting audiovisual industries, facilitating access to new partners and promoting projects with international potential. The initiative will help deepen ties between Europe and Ibero-America while broadening collaboration opportunities for participating production companies.
